Under the Copyright Act 1968, it may be necessary to obtain permission from a copyright owner for certain types of usage of material – including photographs. Although copyright may no longer subsist in pre 1955 photographs held by the Museum, permission must still be sought from the Great Lakes Museum before reproducing them in any format including digitally and online. Some photographs may not be available for copying due to copyright and or other restrictions including requests made by donors or in respect of cultural sensitivities. Thank you for your co-operation.
